The earth seemed to move this past week as this 'Lipa' concert saga unfolded. Many decent, ehrliche people were disoriented by this episode that raised so many questions and provided precious few answers. This was compounded by the fact that the incredible power of the Internet served as a digital echo chamber which magnified every twist and turn of the narrative throughout the week.

The most challenging questions, however, are perhaps not those regarding the particulars of this incident, but rather those that are more global in nature. What do we tell our grown children when they come home from school and relate what they heard? More frightening and unsettling are the questions on the minds of many members of our kehilah kedosha, "I am disturbed by the imperfections in the Kol Koreh and I'm not sure I understand the message our gedolim are sending us"
